

BRADFORD A. KAY, MS, MPH, DR.PH.

Dr. Kay has more than 20 years of international experience in biomedical research, public health and biological safety.

University academic positions have included those as Research Associate Professor of International Health at the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health and as Research Associate Professor of Medicine and Chief, Enteric Microbiology with the University of Maryland, School of Medicine.

He has more than 13 years of professional experience with the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Atlanta, Georgia in the National Center for Infectious Diseases.

Dr. Kay's professional experience in biological safety includes positions as the Associate Director for Occupational Safety and Health, University of Maryland Program of Environmental Health and Safety and Campus Biosafety Officer for the University of Maryland at Baltimore.

Positions with the World Health Organization include those as Laboratory Adviser for the WHO Regional Office for Africa, Harare, Zimbabwe, as Coordinator of the Laboratory Capacity Development Programme of the Communicable Disease Surveillance and Response Office in Lyon, France (CSR/Lyon).

He is currently the Coordinator of WHO CSR/Lyon activities for biosafety, preparedness for deliberate epidemics and the prevention and control of healthcare-associated infections.