PROJECT ENACT

Enhancing Africa's response to transnational organized crime
(2017 – 2026)

INTERPOL's Project ENACT was the first initiative of its kind to analyse the scale of transnational organized crime in Africa.

It supported African law enforcement in developing proactive and sustainable approaches to reduce the impact of organized crime on security, governance and development by:

- Promoting criminal intelligence analysis as a strategic tool against transnational organized crime;
- Producing evidence-based analysis to inform policy decisions and enhance cooperation;
- Building investigative skills and analytical capacity to enable effective and coordinated responses.

9

years advancing criminal intelligence analysis in Africa and promoting the integration of gender perspectives in analytical work

35

African countries now have INTERPOL-certified trainers delivering analytical techniques nationally

10

African countries equipped with fully operational criminal analysis units

21

strategic analytical reports produced and disseminated to African chiefs of police and units.

240

African female police officers supported and empowered through the womENACTion initiative

600

officers from 52 African countries trained in criminal intelligence analysis

1 • ENACT strengthened analytical capacity through structured training and promoting a shared intelligence culture among African law enforcement agencies.

- 30 training courses delivered across 52 African countries
- Five Train-the-Trainer programmes completed to ensure sustainability
- Three targeted conferences empowered senior leaders from more than 40 African countries with practical insights on using criminal intelligence analysis to disrupt transnational organized crime networks

2. ENACT supported evidence-based decision-making by producing analysis on key organized crime threats.

- ✓ 21 analytical strategic reports delivered actionable insights to law enforcement leaders and policymakers in Africa
- ✓ Multiple reports informed regional crime-prevention strategies and contributed to the publication of INTERPOL Purple Notices on emerging crime trends
- ✓ Key themes included underexposed crimes such as organ trafficking or iboga trafficking

3. ENACT established national criminal intelligence analysis units to ensure sustainable capability.

- Units established in Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Gabon, Malawi, Namibia, Niger, Uganda, Senegal, Tanzania and Togo
- Long-term mentoring provided lasting capability
- Workshops and exchange programmes fostered experience-sharing, cooperation, and enabled teams to produce sub-regional analytical reports
- Units now provide analytical support to investigations and operations, deliver training within national police academies, produce regular threat assessments and contribute to national security strategies

4. womENACTion promoted gender-inclusive policing by empowering African female police officers

- ✓ Virtual networking and learning platform engaged 240 officers from 38 countries, supporting professional development and peer exchange
 - ✓ 85% now apply acquired skills; 50% joined intelligence units; 100% would recommend the initiative
- ✓ Mentorship initiative supported female law enforcement officers to produce strategic analytical reports
- ✓ Analytical bootcamps strengthened skills of female officers from 44 countries
- ✓ Expert group drafted guidelines for African chiefs of police on integrating gender perspectives into criminal intelligence analysis

INTERPOL

Project ENACT was funded by the European Union and implemented by INTERPOL, the Institute for Security Studies and the Global Initiative Against Transnational Organized Crime.

The French Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the German Federal Foreign Office also provided INTERPOL with funding for ENACT during phases 2 and 3.
