URGES member countries to redouble their efforts to share information concerning terrorist groups and individuals who are active in their countries and globally, particularly regarding the methods used by al-Qaeda to recruit and train nationals to plan and conduct attacks in their home countries;

URGES member countries to more fully utilize the data services and other operational police tools available through Interpol, particularly the Interpol Stolen and Lost Travel Document (SLTD) database, to assist in identifying and preventing the movements of terrorists;

URGES member countries, whenever a terrorist attack occurs, to request that Interpol send in an Incident Response Team (IRT), in order to bring international expertise, international best practices, and access to international information to the investigation, and to allow the international law enforcement community to build upon its institutional learning in its shared fight against terrorism.
